Location

Melrose offers an appealing blend of historic character, natural beauty and modern living, making it one of the Borders' most desirable places to call home. Set amid beautiful rolling countryside, the town is steeped in history, with the magnificent ruins of Melrose Abbey providing an impressive reminder of Scotland's rich past. At the heart of the town is a vibrant centre, home to an enticing selection of independent shops, welcoming cafés and traditional pubs, while a strong sense of community adds greatly to its charm. The renowned Greenyards, home to Melrose Rugby Football Club, plays an important part in the town's sporting heritage and local identity. The surrounding countryside provides an exceptional setting for outdoor pursuits, from peaceful walks along the River Tweed to more energetic climbs in the Eildon Hills, where the distinctive triple peaks reward walkers with far-reaching views across the Borders landscape. Melrose is also well placed for travel further afield, with the nearby Borders Railway at Tweedbank providing a direct rail connection to Edinburgh Waverley taking less than an hour. This excellent connection allows residents to enjoy the beauty and tranquillity of the Borders while keeping the capital within easy reach. Whether seeking a peaceful retreat or a welcoming community in which to put down roots, Melrose is a truly special place to call home.
